From Hand Surgery to Handoffs: Tackling This Week's Sports & Entertainment Highlights

By Joshua Bloomgarden on 9.8.23 | Posted in Sports & Entertainment Spotlight

Welcome back to the Spotlight! I am just a few days removed from hand surgery, so on the one hand, I'd ask you to excuse my brevity. But on the other hand I'd sheepishly ask, hat in hand, for you to clap your hands for my shorthanded effort. Your handsome award for handling my handwringing puns?: this week's installment will ensure your finger is on the pulse for the latest in Sports and Entertainment.

- On the heels of a statement upset by the Deion Sanders-coached University of Colorado football team over Texas Christian University, Colorado's star players Shedeur Sanders (Deion's son) and Travis Hunter saw their name, image and likeness valuations soar by a combined $5.3 million. Talk about a Rocky Mountain high!
- Just as Universal Music Group and Deezer forge a pact on a royalty model that incentivizes popular human recording artists over those of artificial intelligence, AI music creator, Ghostwriter releases a fake Travis Scott track and Warner Music Group signs digital influencer Noonouri to a record deal. To Noonouri's credit, "she" was gracious in thanking her ardent supporter, 001101011100.
- Hedge fund billionaire and New York Mets owner Steve Cohen purchased a New York based team in Tiger Woods and Rory McIlroy's TGL Golf League. Because if there's one thing the Mets know better than the baseball diamond, it's the golf course.
