This Week in Sports & Entertainment: A Tale of Comebacks and Cautionary Tales

By Joshua Bloomgarden on 10.24.25 | Posted in Sports & Entertainment Spotlight

Welcome back to the Spotlight! This time of year, the color orange not only evokes pumpkins and falling leaves, but also basketball. Indeed, the NBA season tipped off this past week, replete with intrigue and excitement on and off the court. Notably, the offseason media rights shuffle reunited the NBA with NBC (reviving the sweet sounds of John Tesh's "Roundball Rock") and brought old faces to new places with the "Inside the NBA" team of Ernie Johnson, Shaquille O'Neal, Charles Barkley and Kenny Smith debuting on ESPN after having moved over from TNT (the latter two hosts predicted a certain orange (and blue) team from New York would be playing for an NBA championship this year).

Regrettably, however, orange also evokes jumpsuits as much as it does jump shots, with the Department of Justice announcing the FBI's arrest of current and former NBA players Chauncey Billups, Damon Jones and Terry Rozier in connection with a federal gambling probe that uncovered several alleged conspiracies involving fixed poker games and sharing of inside information with bettors. To be sure, the timing is awful for the NBA (if there ever was a time for a sports league to have its integrity called into question). But it is also rather inauspicious timing for it to be announced this very same week that collegiate athletes and schools' athletics staff will now be permitted to gamble on professional sports. Perhaps the conduct of the pros will serve as a cautionary tale for collegiate athletes rather than a foreshadowing of things to come in this sports business environment. At the very least, it should serve as a reminder of the need for athletes' mentors and advisors to encourage the exercise of better judgment regarding the use of money and the privileged position that allows them to earn it.

- Having already launched a lifestyle brand, "American Riviera Orchard" (recently rebranded "As Ever") Meghan Markle looks poised to be next to wade into the crowded waters of celebrity-branded beauty products. A word of advice to Markle's potential business partner: go heavy on the equity – she tends to distance herself from royalties.
- Rock and Roll Hall of Famer Bruce Springsteen, when asked about Jeremy Allen White's portrayal of him in the biopic "Springsteen: Deliver Me from Nowhere," said that he could not tell the difference between White's voice and that of his own on certain recordings. AI-driven music companies, when asked about Jeremy Allen White's portrayal of Springsteen in the biopic "Springsteen: Deliver Me from Nowhere" said "stay in your lane!”

- Ari Emanuel’s global events and experience company MARI acquired digital ticketing platform TodayTix, in what I can only assume is a gross overpayment for tickets to see “Wicked” on Broadway.
