

Foster Garvey Expands Real Estate, Land Use & Environmental Practice

Press Release
April 1, 2025
Foster Garvey Newsroom

Foster Garvey is pleased to welcome three new professionals to our Real Estate, Land Use & Environmental group in Seattle: Jacque St. Romain (Principal), Lindsey Folcik (Associate) and Heather Hattrup (Legal Practice Assistant). The team's arrival strengthens the firm's ability to provide comprehensive legal counsel on real estate transactions, litigation, land use and regulatory matters.

Jacque St. Romain brings extensive experience representing clients in real estate transactions and land use development. She works with a diverse range of clients, from small businesses to large international corporations, as well as single-family and multi-family property owners, landlords and managers of commercial properties. Jacque has successfully guided clients through complex real estate transactions, addressing boundary disputes, title concerns and easement rights. Her practice spans the acquisition, development and sale of single-family, multi-family, mixed-use and commercial properties.

"We're thrilled to welcome Jacque to the team," said Bryan Helfer, Co-Practice Group Leader, "Her leadership, breadth of experience in real estate law, and her ability to navigate complex legal and regulatory issues will be an asset to our clients across the region."

Lindsey Folcik is an experienced litigator focused on resolving complex real estate disputes involving land use, eminent domain and commercial leasing. She has successfully represented clients in high-profile condemnation actions, commercial landlord-tenant conflicts and other real estate litigation matters. Whether through strategic litigation or thoughtful settlement solutions, Lindsey works closely with clients to protect their interests and achieve favorable outcomes.
