Foster Garvey is pleased to announce that Kelly M. Woodward has joined the firm as Counsel in its Labor, Employment & Immigration practice. Based in Portland and also admitted to practice in Washington, Kelly brings extensive experience advising public agencies, managing complex labor relations programs, engaging in collective bargaining negotiations and guiding employment policy across large-scale government operations.

Kelly most recently served as Deputy Chief Human Resources Officer and Acting Chief Human Resources Officer for the Washington State Office of Financial Management State Human Resources Division. In those roles, she oversaw collective bargaining strategy, classification and compensation, workforce planning and HR policy for more than 70,000 employees across Washington's state agencies. Her work supported a wide range of institutions, including 24/7 facilities such as hospitals, juvenile centers and correctional institutions, as well as many institutions in the state's higher education system. Prior to her work with the state, Kelly held senior human resources and compliance roles within higher education institutions, where she advised on employment policy, regulatory compliance and faculty governance.

"Kelly has deep experience advising public agencies in the Pacific Northwest on their labor and employment strategy and addressing pressing and high-impact labor and employment issues," said Jared Van Kirk, Chair of Foster Garvey's Labor, Employment & Immigration practice. "Her work adds a valuable dimension to our practice and to the clients we serve."
