TRUSTS & ESTATES

The practice of trusts and estates law requires lawyers who have and maintain the wide range of substantive legal skills and quantitative analytical skills demanded by this constantly changing area of the law. These lawyers also must have substantial and caring interpersonal skills that enable them to relate effectively with clients, their families, and others in providing the services of this intensely personal and private area of the law.

The attorneys in our Trusts & Estates Group demonstrate these skills every day in their representation of a wide range of clients, including wealthy individuals, multigenerational families, business owners, professionals, charities and other nonprofit organizations, and professional fiduciaries. We provide a wide range of trusts and estates services, including estate planning; probate and trust administration; family business succession planning; charitable gift planning; and fiduciary controversies and litigation representation.
