November 26, 2018

In September, along with many other new employment bills, Governor Jerry Brown signed into law AB 2338, which includes a provision requiring minors 14-17 years of age and their parents/guardians to receive sexual harassment prevention training prior to the issuance of an entertainment work permit by the Labor Commissioner (with few exceptions, such permits are required in order for a minor to appear in any television show, movie, recording, etc.)

The new law provides that the training "shall consist of training administered by a third-party vendor, on-site, electronically, via Internet Web site, or other means" and must cover, at a minimum, the components specified in the Department of Fair Employment and Housing's informational pamphlet on sexual harassment (Form 185).
