legal expertise

Ariana Addo-Yobo is a litigation associate who represents clients in a broad range of complex disputes across state and federal courts, as well as in arbitration and mediation. She represents clients across a variety of industries, including financial services, healthcare, technology, and retail, and is experienced in managing matters from early case assessment through resolution.

Ariana has significant experience in labor and employment litigation, including defending employers in single-plaintiff and class action matters involving discrimination, harassment, retaliation, wrongful termination, and whistleblower claims, as well as class and representative actions under the California Private Attorneys General Act (PAGA).

Prior to her legal career, Ariana worked in the financial services industry, where she advised clients on complex tax matters. This background informs her practical, business-oriented approach to litigation and client service.
