legal expertise

Irina Constantin dedicates her practice to counseling and representing management in all aspects of the labor-management relationship. With the goal of assisting clients in finding practical, business solutions to multifaceted traditional labor problems, she advises on matters that arise in the course of contract administration and provides strategic advice on issues such as work stoppages, union contract campaigns and organizing drives. Irina has litigated the full range of labor-management issues in public forums, including the labor relations board and federal and state courts, as well as in private labor arbitrations. Her experience extends across a wide array of industries, including media and entertainment, telecommunications, retail and education.
