Xander Meise will be speaking on "Practical Strategies in the Arbitration of International Disputes Involving State-Owned Entities," at the CiARB Arbitration Conference. This panel will take place on Tuesday, April 3 at 11:15 AM (EST).

Sovereignty is ubiquitous in modern global business, especially in emerging markets. From extractive industries to infrastructure, state-owned entities account for a significant amount of foreign investment flows. This has resulted in a significant amount of transnational disputes. Holding those entities accountable or defending those entities raises a host of novel legal issues under domestic and international law. These novelties require complex and proactive strategies for counsel and arbitrators alike. This panel will discuss these strategies from the perspectives of state and private parties.
