MSK partner David Rugendorf was quoted in the article, "What to Know About USCIS's New Policy On Revocations," published by Law360 on November 22, 2017.

The article discusses a new policy memo released by U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services which says that foreign nationals who have employment-based immigrant visa petitions, and who have properly asked to change jobs, must be given a chance to take part in the visa petition revocation process.

From the article...

"[The adopted decision] not only didn't open up a big class of beneficiaries that have a voice, but also, it made sure to say that subsequent employers have no right, either," noted David Rugendorf of Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP."
