MSK partner Jeremy Mittman was quoted in the article, "Temperature Checks Pose Logistical 'Minefield' For Employers," published by Bloomberg Law on April 2, 2020.

From the article...

"The prospect of getting an operation up and running is daunting for employers, some management attorneys said, especially when an elevated body temperature might not even be an indication of Covid-19.

'It's certainly not foolproof, by any means,' said Jeremy Mittman, a Los Angeles-based partner with Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp.

One of Mittman's clients also ran into trouble trying to obtain thermometers. The corporate client purchased temperature guns, but none of the instructions came in English, rendering them useless."
