Overview

Annalise is an investigator. As she sees it, her job is to put the puzzle pieces together. She never takes things at face value and is always willing to explore additional facts in order to leverage a client's defense.

As a member of the General Liability Service Group, Annalise represents clients of all sizes, from large corporations to small family businesses. She also has experience representing individual insureds and has a background working in coverage practice. She understands the implicated policy issues that can arise once a lawsuit is filed.

In addition to being an attorney, Annalise is an avid golfer. Having grown up in southern California, she is slowly learning to embrace the Midwest winters.
