Overview

Chris takes a strategic, solution-oriented approach to litigation—identifying issues early and preparing thoroughly to secure favorable outcomes. His commitment to diligence, persistence, and sound judgment has made him a valued member of trial teams at every stage of litigation, from initial pleadings through appeal.

Chris focuses his practice on general defense litigation, representing clients in a broad range of matters including business disputes, business torts, class actions, employment claims, insurance coverage, civil and constitutional rights, and complex torts. He also brings significant experience in managing e-discovery, including overseeing teams of external vendors through large-scale document review, production, and archiving.
