Overview

After several years as a human resources professional, Eleanor's desire to make a positive impact on her community led her to pursue a career in law. As a curious and logical individual by nature, she enjoys creative problem solving and thinking outside of the box as a litigator. Her former profession allows her to understand how her work impacts organizations as a whole and lead with empathy in building relationships with her clients.

As a member of the firm's Business Litigation Service Group, Eleanor provides guidance to businesses across industries on a variety of issues and disputes, including breach of contract and premises liability matters.

Outside of the office, Eleanor enjoys spending time with her family, which includes two cats and a horse.
