Overview

A former philosophy student, Sarah approaches legal work with deep curiosity and strong ethical sense.

Sarah understands that the transportation field constantly evolves, and recent emphasis on state and federal regulation present clients with complex new challenges. Her experience as in-house counsel for an environmental waste management company gives her clear insight into the needs and realities of today's transportation companies.

As a member of Amundsen Davis's Transportation & Logistics Service Group, Sarah represents transportation companies in legal matters including personal injury, wrongful death, environmental compliance, toxic tort, employment discrimination, workers' compensation, and contract negotiation.

Sarah recognizes she would not be the attorney she is today without the support of her community and is an active volunteer for causes she cares about in her free time.
