Overview

A highly empathetic and curious person with a passion for social sciences, history, and international relations, Tolu knew understanding the law and how it affects people's lives would empower her to help others and make a difference in society.

As a member of the Transportation & Logistics Service Group at Amundsen Davis, Tolu represents clients in the transportation and construction industries on matters including wrongful death, personal injury, property damages, commercial lawsuits, and construction accidents and defects.

Tolu transitioned to the legal field from a professional background in business management. Clients in both fields have benefitted from her creative thinking, problem-solving, analysis, initiative, and ability to comprehend vast amounts of information.

Tolu operates with the understanding that success lies on the other side of perseverance. She is determined never to give up on achieving positive outcomes for her clients despite potential roadblocks.
