

COVID-19 Testing: What Employers Need to Know

Event

Amundsen Davis, Webcast

January 10, 2022

While employers continue to review their COVID-19 protocols under various government vaccine mandates (including OSHA's ETS) as well as their own policies and practices and customer requirements, testing continues to be a confusing topic for many. From the types of testing that can be relied on to satisfy such obligations to whether an employer must pay for such testing, there is a tremendous amount of uncertainty for employers trying to navigate their processes and policies related to employee testing. Additionally, testing capacity and supply is also a growing concern. Please join Jeff Risch and Sara Zorich on January 10 for a one hour webcast at Noon CT for a practical discussion on what is required of employers in adopting a testing program and how to efficiently and effectively comply with the onslaught of new obligations concerning the same in today's environment.

PROFESSIONALS

Jeffrey A. Risch
Partner

Sara Zorich
Partner

RELATED SERVICES

Affirmative Action

Cannabis in the Workplace

Employee Benefits, Executive
Compensation & Tax

Employment Advice &
Counsel

Equal Pay Compliance

Government Regulation,
Audit & Compliance

Immigration & Global
Mobility

Labor, Employment &
Immigration

Prevailing Wage

Public Sector

Staffing Agency, Independent
Contractor & Contingent
Workforce

Traditional Labor & Union
Relations

Unfair Competition
Counseling & Litigation

Vaccine Mandates in the Workplace

Wage & Hour

Workers' Compensation