

Minimizing the Risks with Workplace Violence and Bullying

USLAW Fall Conference, Colorado Springs, CO
September 23, 2016

Workplace violence and bullying is a discouraging reality that employers need to be prepared to deal with. Nearly 2 million American workers report being victims of workplace violence and bullying every year. Julie Proscia serves on a panel as a part of the Fall 2016 USLAW NETWORK Client Conference in Colorado, that covers strategies for preventing bullying and violence including: the causes of violence, the impact of violence on a company, the legal landscape for addressing bullying and violence, creating an action plan to address bullying and violence, how to identify potentially violent employees and best practices for responding to violence and bullying.
