

Addressing Workplace Violence in Health Care: Protecting Those Who Care for Us

Event

Amundsen Davis, Webcast
May 8, 2025 | 12:00 PM CT

Health care workers are on the front lines every day—delivering critical care, offering compassion, and saving lives. Yet, they are increasingly at risk of workplace violence, a growing concern that affects their safety, mental health, and overall well-being. From physical aggression to verbal threats, the impact of workplace violence can be profound and far-reaching.

Join Co-Chair of the Health Care Service Group and Labor & Employment Partner, Suzannah Overholt for a timely and insightful discussion on how health care organizations can proactively address this pressing issue and better protect their workforce.

What You Can Expect

This informative session will explore:

- The physical and psychological impact of workplace violence on health care workers.
- Key legal and organizational considerations for employers.
- Strategies for prevention, response, and mitigation.
- Policy recommendations and training protocols to foster a safer environment.

Who Should Attend?

Health care facility employees of all levels of seniority and across any area of specialty will benefit from this presentation. This includes, but is not limited to, c-suite executives, general counsel, administrators, human resources professionals, and individual employees at hospitals, senior centers, assisted living facilities, urgent care, rehabilitation centers, outpatient care centers, specialized care centers, and home health agencies.

PROFESSIONALS

Suzannah Wilson Overholt
Partner

RELATED SERVICES

Health Care

Labor, Employment &
Immigration