Episode Description

Columbus attorney Larry James has dealt with a lot situations - race relations, police actions, Ohio State football off-field challenges - during his career. He offers informed perspectives on my latest podcast, and we recount how close, and yet so far, from meeting as little boys growing up in Demopolis, Ala., in the early '60s. Plus, Boss-tin Ward joins me as usual, and this time we talk about the Buckeyes getting back to work formally at the Woody Hayes Athletic Center for the first time since early March. Maybe, just maybe, football season is right around the corner after all.
