September 14, 2021

Trade remedies are a means by which businesses can look to their governments to address the impacts of unfair or adverse trading practices (dumping, injurious subsidies or an unforeseen surge in imports). As governments continue to tackle the ongoing COVID-19 crisis, trade remedies are alive and well.

The most frequent initiators of trade remedy investigations in 2020 included India, the United States, Canada, Australia and the EU. This webcast provides an overview of recent developments in trade remedies in key jurisdictions of interest.
