With a myriad of privacy threats for businesses to consider, two of the most overlooked security gaps are common to all organizations – their employees and third-party partners. These individuals and external entities often have access to sensitive or privileged company and customer data, opening additional avenues for exposure and security vulnerabilities of confidential information.

Join Amundsen Davis's Cybersecurity & Data Privacy Service Group attorneys Molly Arranz, practice group chair, and John Williams, partner, for a timely Cybersecurity Awareness Month discussion on how to keep your organization safe. Molly and John will investigate how third-party service providers and employees increase vulnerabilities and provide proactive steps businesses can take to mitigate risk.
