

Defended a Physician and Medical Group Alleged to Have Negligently Prescribed Trazodone for Sleep

Defended a physician and medical group alleged to have negligently prescribed Trazodone for sleep, which allegedly caused a patient to develop episodes of priapism, permanent damage, and required surgery. A pharmaceutical manufacturer was involved in the litigation. Thorough investigation revealed the patient was also receiving erectile dysfunction medications from another physician during the alleged negligence, which was never disclosed to the defendant physician.
