

Successfully Represented a Wisconsin Manufacturer Accused of Patent Infringement and had the Claims Dismissed

Amundsen Davis represented a Wisconsin manufacturer accused of patent infringement and successfully had the claims against our client dismissed. At summary judgment, we presented evidence and argument that the claims against our client for patent infringement were unpatentable and invalid, because they were obvious based on prior art. During discovery, we worked closely with our client and expert to find the invalidating prior art.
