

Won Summary Judgment for a Food Processing Company

Amundsen Davis won summary judgment for a food processing company after the plaintiff accused the company of having a foreign object in their food which allegedly triggered their PTSD. The plaintiff had no expert witness to establish liability and res ipsa loquitur was not available to the plaintiff. We won summary judgment based on the argument that expert testimony was required to establish liability because this matter involved special knowledge, skill or experience.

PROFESSIONALS

Joe Trevino
Partner

RELATED SERVICES

General Liability