

Dispensaries Confident Protections For Budding Pot Industry Will Stay

Chicago Daily Law Bulletin
January 11, 2018

In the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin's article titled, "Dispensaries Confident Protections For Budding Pot Industry Will Stay," Michael McGrory comment on congress's consideration on whether it's necessary to proceed in the renewal of the Rohrabacher-Blumenauer Amendment: an amendment that stops the Department of Justice (DOJ) from using federal dollars to prosecute marijuana-related charges in states where cannabis is legal.

Michael states, "It remains to be seen whether other courts will follow the [9th] Circuit's interpretation of the statutory language. However, I think the reasoning employed by the [9th] Circuit in McIntosh will prove persuasive around the country."

To read the article in full, visit the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin's website here.

PROFESSIONALS

Michael McGrory
Partner

RELATED SERVICES

Banking & Finance