Congratulations to Molly Arranz and Sofia Valdivia on being named "2024 Law360 Distinguished Legal Writing Award" winners! Molly and Sofia's article "'Pixels' and 'Cookies,' Charming Terms for Tracking Technology, Can Lead to Ugly Data Privacy Headaches," was selected by The Burton Awards which is a nonprofit organization that runs in association with the Library of Congress.

The award winners are selected by judges and law school professors, including professors from Harvard Law School, Georgetown Law Center and UC Berkley Law School. This honor was only given to 20 writers/ articles submitted by the country's 1,000 largest law firms.

William Burton, Founder and Chair of the awards program, said "The recipients are truly exemplary, skillful, and effective writers. The highest standard of excellence in legal writing." Congratulations Molly and Sofia!

You can view the entire list of recipients on The Burton Awards' website.
