Ryan Jacobson was quoted in a recent news article in the Chicago Sun Times on a pending lawsuit against a Chinatown lounge, where a man is seeking more than $100K in damages.

According to the court documents filed in Cook County Circuit Court, a man who was shot last year at a Chinatown neighborhood lounge is suing the club's owner and the business for negligence—claiming they are responsible for the incident when they allowed a person with a concealed gun into the lounge.

In a statement, Ryan describes the suit as an unpredictable occurrence, denying that any act or omission on the lounge's part was a cause of this "unforeseeable incident." He commented, "we expect the authorities will prosecute and punish the only person responsible for this senseless criminal act—the shooter."
