The new infrastructure bill may be polarizing in the cryptocurrency community as explained by Gian M. Volpicelli's article "New Regulation Could Cause a Split in the Crypto Community" in Wired Magazine. While many were fighting for amendments regarding cryptocurrency to be added to the bill, it was pushed through unchanged. There may now be a division between the larger cryptocurrency giants and smaller users, such as those involved with decentralized finance. Given some of the regulations in the bill, Joe Carlasare is quoted in the article, discussing the effects on decentralized finance developers, and what it could mean going forward for cryptocurrency users.
