Michael McGrory was quoted in a Physicians Practice article titled, "Medical Marijuana: Know the Legalities of Prescribing." Now that medical marijuana is legal in 23 states, physicians are having concerns about regulation and protecting their medical licenses.

"There are some issues physicians ought to look at before entering into this space...the rules vary state by state and they generally are not that strict, but physicians need to follow them to make sure their license is safe and that they're not exposing themselves to civil penalties from the state health department or similar agencies."
