

Does the Russian Invasion Signal the End of Globalization or Merely a Recalibration?

Publication

WisLaw NOW

May 16, 2022

In Ngosong Fonkem's article "Does the Russian Invasion Signal the End of Globalization or Merely a Recalibration?" published by WisLaw NOW he discusses the Russian invasion and how it affects the world and global trade.

He states that, "the more likely impact of the ongoing seismic trade shifts is a recalibration of engagement from North America and Western Europe away from Eurasia, to other Global South regions, such as Africa and Latin America."

Ngosong also talks about the humanitarian crisis that the invasion has created and the history behind economic engagements with other communist governments.

PROFESSIONALS

Ngosong Fonkem
Partner

RELATED SERVICES

Corporate & Securities