Ben represents insurers in high-stakes matters across a broad range of insurance and reinsurance coverage contexts, including public entity and officials liability, professional liability, cyber liability, general liability, and bad faith matters. Ben helps his clients pinpoint business goals and develop a strategic approach to creatively and collaboratively resolve disputes, or to aggressively litigate when necessary. He has represented insurers in federal and state courts nationwide.

Representative Matters

- Represents professional liability insurers in coverage disputes involving claims against municipalities, public officials, directors and officers, lawyers, accountants, real estate agents, and other professionals.
- Represents commercial property insurers in coverage disputes relating to business interruption and related coverage, including in the COVID-19 context.
- Represents general liability carriers in coverage disputes involving construction, hazardous waste, asbestos, and products liability claims.
- Secured published appellate decisions favorable to insurers on key issues, such as rulings relating to business interruption coverage, coverage for antitrust liability and exclusions in D&O policies and professional liability policies.
- Represented a DC police officer in a lawsuit against a national restaurant chain accused of race discrimination against customers in numerous states.
