Nate represents insurers in connection with cyber risks. He routinely advises insurers in connection with first- and third-party cyber issues, and provides strategic advice on other media, technology, and privacy-related exposures.

Nate has worked on over 400 ransomware matters involving businesses of all sizes, and he leverages his experience to counsel insurers on ransomware-related issues.

Representative Matters

- Counsels insurers on first-party claims involving cyber-related incidents, including claims for business interruption, data recovery, cyber extortion, and other first-party coverages.
- Represents insurers for third-party claims arising from cyber- and privacy-related matters, including for technology-related professional services.
- Advises insurers on media liability exposures and associated claims.
- Conducts legal research and drafts pleadings addressing a wide variety of procedural and substantive issues for insurers involved in coverage litigation.
- Assists in monitoring complex litigation in state and federal courts and counsels insurers on coverage issues with respect to such litigation.
