Wiley, Rein & Fielding's Election Law practice serves many of the country's largest corporations and non-profit organizations. The firm's election law attorneys represent public officials, political parties, individual campaign committees and candidates on a number of federal statutes, including the Federal Election Campaign Act, the Ethics in Government Act, the Internal Revenue Code and the Lobbying Disclosure Act, as well as analogous state law and Congressional rules. These laws and rules pertain to political contributions, the operation of political action committees and the use of corporate facilities for political purposes.

Partners in the group have served in a variety of senior government and political positions, as well as authored articles and texts. WRF election law lawyers frequently speak before corporations and at seminars organized by business groups such as the Chamber of Commerce, the American Bar Association, the Practicing Law Institute and Glasser Legal Works.
